This image shows a full-page spread of the May 18, 1856, issue of The Republican newspaper. The layout is dense with text, organized into several columns. At the top left, there's a large advertisement for 'JOHN EMMERT'S CLOVELL GOOD TIMES HAVE Come Again!' followed by a column of news items under the heading 'SPECIAL EDILES'. Below these are sections for 'LOCAL DEPARTMENT', 'THE REPUBLICAN', and 'ADVERTISEMENTS'. The central part of the page contains numerous news articles, some with small illustrations or diagrams. To the right, there are several columns of classified ads for 'WALL PAINTERS', 'CLOTHING', 'CLOTHES', 'CLOTH DRUG', 'POLO DRUG AND Book Store', 'NEWTON WOODRUFF', and 'DRUGS AND MEDICINES'. Further down, there are sections for 'PAINTS, OILS, AND GLASS', 'VARNISHES', 'SCHOOL BOOKS', 'STATIONERY', 'DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL', and 'HIDES AND HIDES'. The bottom half of the page features a large section of classified ads for 'REDUCED PRICES', 'EXCHANGE DRY GOODS OR GROCERIES', 'IMPORTANT TO FARMERS!', 'FOR SALE', 'EXTRA BAKING ATTACHMENT', 'FOR SALE', 'NOTICE', '1000 GOOD BUGGIES AND CARRIAGES', 'FRESH SUPPLY OF', and 'WAGONS AND BUGGIES'. The right margin has a column for 'Dissolution' notices.

Some of your valiant soldiers are at the old field and to the battle-gate.

A venerable soldier, long a citizen of New England, Mr. John H. Long, of New Haven, Conn., who has written many books, has just written one more, "How to Win Many Friends."

"A boy, at a friend's suggestion, is as though he had, was asked who discovered America. 'I never did,' says a British editor, 'if he didn't, where's Columbus?'

"A company, meeting the appointment of a friend as partner, voted:

"He attends to the mail so well as he does in the States, he will make a very attractive and efficient officer."

"Which, my dearest lady, do you think the most pleasant place in the world?"

"That immediately above the atmosphere that surrounds the earth, I should think."

"And why so?"

"Because, I may tell, there, all bodies have their gravity."

"A few days since, a brother offered a reward of $10 to the best medical for 'instantly removing superficies hair.' Among the answers was one forwarded by a gentleman who speaks from experience. We give it—'Unshave to him, swimming against her will.'

"Economy.—'Oh, eat up, dear—eat up,' says mamma. 'I can't, ma, I've ate enough.' 'Oh, yes, dear, eat up what's on your plate, so that I needn't go to bed.' How common a practice this is among children beyond the wants of nature, and making them glutinous all their lives, so that the scraps need not be fed."

"Economic economy this!"

"When Aristotle, so remarkable for his equitable attachment to justice, was reported by the people at Athens and condemned to banishment, a peasant who was unacquainted with the person of Aristotle, applied to him to vote against Aristotle. 'Has he done you any wrong?' said Aristotle, 'that you are punishing him in this manner?' 'No,' replied the countryman, 'I don't even know him; but I am tired, and weary with hearing every one call him the just.'

IMPOSTER CHRISTIANS.—There was a storyman, who was of a nervous temperament, and often became quite vexed by finding his little grandchild in his study. One day, one of three children was standing by his mother's side, and she was speaking to him of heaven. 'Ma,' said he, 'I don't want to go to heaven, my son!' 'No, ma, I am sure I don't.' 'Why not, my son?' 'Why grandpa will be there, won't he?' 'Yes, he will be there.' 'Well, as soon as he sees us there, he will come scolding along, and say, "Why, what, what, what are these boys here?" I don't want to go to heaven, as grandpa is going to be there.'

An ATMOSPHERE CONVICTED.—Sir Isaac Newton having an acquaintance who denied the existence of a Supreme Being, took the following method to convince him of his error upon his own principles: Expecting him on a visit, he prepared a very handsome globe of the starry heavens, which could not escape his friend's observation, who seized the first occasion to ask him whence it came, and to whom it belonged. 'Not me,' said Sir Isaac, 'it was it ever made by any person, but came here by chance!' 'That,' replied his skeptical friend, 'is absolutely impossible; you surely jest.' Sir Isaac, however, seriously persisting in his statement, took occasion to reason with his friend upon his own atheistical principle. 'You will not,' said he, 'believe that this small body originated by chance, and yet you would contest that those heavy bodies, of which it is a faint diminutive resemblance, came in to existence without order or design.' Pursuing the chain of reasoning, his friend was at first confounded, in the next place convicted, and ultimately joined in cordial acknowledgment of the absurdity of denying the existence of a God.

The Drop of Water the Brook, the River, and the Ocean.

A drop of water that sparkled like a jewel in the sun, once fell from the clouds into a little mountain stream, and as it lost its identity remained in all the anguish of dissolution.

"Alas! what a catastrophe! I am swallowed up in immensity." The little stream laughed, as it rolled down the mountain side, at the lamentation of such an insignificant thing as a drop of water, and vain of its importance, continued brawling its way with all the pride of conscious superiority, till at length, with a sudden plunge, it fell headlong into a mighty river, and like the drop of water, was lost in moment, crying out in do last agony, "O fate, who would have thought a brach of my size could be swallowed so easily?" The river hurried on its course for the foolish little stream and continued its course, gathering strength and pride, breaking through mountains, tearing the rocks from the sea, and coursing in a thousand meanders through flowery meadows, till it found its way to the vast and melancholy ocean, in whose boundless waste it lost its being, like the drop of water and the little mountain stream. "To it perishes" exclaimed the mighty river, "that I have been their collecting tributaries from half the world, only to be once nothing at last."

"To this with the man." Then he gazed in magnificence, like the iron water, that becomes a laughing, bold, brawling thing, like the brook, now so proud and great, like the ocean, and are thus everlastingly triumphant over the heart. What an eternity of life they are lost in,
